Residential School, Day of Remembrance

Overview

The project is intended to introduce an event for First Nation communities to host a gathering for one day a year in the form of a Naming Ceremony, meaningful in its dedication to remembering those that attended residential school.

The ceremony will be inclusive to all and is a gathering time where family and friends can share memories of loved ones. The day will foster community and personal development by bringing together First Nation survivors and First Nations people who were inter-generationally affected. It will also provide a sharing and learning environment where Indigenous and non-Indigenous people from surrounding areas can connect and remember those that attended residential school
